A sensational French 19th century Louis XV st. kingwood, ormolu, Coromandel and marble commode, attributed to Henri Dasson. The chest is raised by elegant slightly curved legs with richly chased wrap around ormolu sabots. Ormolu chutes lead up each leg to stunning large scrolled foliate corner mounts in a rich satin and burnished finish. At the center are two drawers, Sans Traverse (without crossbar), showcasing the high level of craftsmanship. Each drawer displays masterfully executed Coromandel framed in a striking scrolled foliate ormolu band with one pierced ormolu keyhole escutcheon. At each side is a beautiful and most decorative sunburst design. The original Brèche d'Àlep marble top follows the shape of the commode, with rounded corners and a fine double mottled border.
