An extremely elegant French 19th century Louis XVI st. ormolu and metal fire screen. The fire screen folds in three parts each raised by a fine mottled base with handsome paw feet. The outer panels display lovely straight and lightly curved ormolu borders framing the protective metal mesh. The central panel also displays an elegant scalloped shape with finely detailed foliate ormolu movements, acanthus leaves and richly chased swaging berried laurel garlands above. Above each hinge are charming and finely detailed acorn finials.
