A sensational and high quality French 19th century Louis XVI st. Sévres porcelain and Ormolu annular clock. The clock is raised by a square Ormolu base with a Coeur de Rai border design above ball supports. The square pedestal has four individual very colorful Sévres porcelain plaques of various birds, flowers and fruits. Above are two levels of Ormolu beaded bands below the circular socle supporting the oblong egg shaped Porcelain clock. The front of the clock has a wonderful scene of figures gathered around a table socializing while a cat roams around. The scene is surrounded by turquoise colored scrolls with gilt accent borders over a cobalt blue background. The opposite side has a sensationally detailed hanging weaved basket filled with an assortment of various cut flowers of various colors. The urn is flanked by two Ormolu female maidens wearing classical attire and having their hair tied in buns. The porcelain dial with a front marker in the shape of an arrow is flanked by two intertwined beaded Ormolu bands all below the lid. The lid with the same continuous turquoise and cobalt blue designs with gilt accents is topped by a richly chased Ormolu finial with flowers.
