A beautiful and most elegant French 19th century Louis XVI st. Sèvres porcelain and ormolu centerpiece. The oblong shaped centerpiece is raised by a square ormolu base with arched sides, concave corners, fine fluted designs, and a striking fluted foliate socle shaped pedestal support with a wrap around beaded band. The Sèvres porcelain body displays a lovely scene of two young ladies and a young man dressed in flowing period attire lying outside with a house and fountain in the background on one side and wonderfully executed colorful blooming flowers on the other each framed within a foliate gold tooled border and set on a lovely blue background. Elegant ormolu handles lead up each side with delicate fluted designs with a swaging berried laurel wreath and connecting to the striking pierced wrap around ormolu band at the rim displaying remarkable geometric interlocking and beaded wrap around bands. The centerpiece is also finished on the inside displaying exceptional intricately detailed hand painted colorful blooming flowers.
