An impressive French early 19th century ormolu and white Carrara marble clock. The clock is raised by elegant scrolled foliate supports with dolphin heads. The rectangular white Carrara marble base is decorated with a striking array of richly chased ormolu mounts with beautiful pierced rinceaux shaped foliate designs and a fine wrap around ormolu band. At the center is a beautiful richly chased cherub with open arms amidst oak leaves and scrolled designs with the striking clock face above him. The clock face displays a unique and most decorative design with fitted enameled reserves of cobalt blue Roman numerals. Above a thick decorative ormolu band with a central lion's head are two richly chased maidens dress in wonderfully executed flowing garments reclined and reading books. All original gilt throughout.
