A striking French 19th century Renaissance st. Patinated Bronze, Ormolu and marble centerpiece possibly by Barbedienne. The centerpiece is raised on an oval marble mottled base below the Ormolu support with patinated cabochons and a handsome open winged dragon supporting the patinated bronze bowl above in the shape of a nautical ship. The bow of the ship is decorated with an open winged maiden with her hands extended out while at the stern is Zephyrus, the Greek god of the west wind, blowing the wind so the vessel moves forward. Wonderful and intricate attention to detail throughout.
