A wonderful German 19th century Biscuit porcelain statue of a nymph and Pan. The statue depicts a charming nymph in front of Pan (the god of the wild, nature and companion to the nymphs) who is looking down at her while she is dancing and playing castanets. The lovely nymph is standing on a ground designed base displaying rocks, foliage, a pan flute and the signature. Wondering subject matter and attention to detail throughout. Pan was a significant figure in the European Romantic movement of the 18th and 19th century.
