A stunning and exceptionally elegant pair of French 19th century Louis XV st. Kingwood, Mahogany, and ormolu consoles possibly by Francois Linke. Each wall mounted console is raised by superb slender cabriole legs with fitted foliate ormolu sabots and fine chutes which lead up to richly chased pierced foliate and blooming flower corner mounts. The straight apron is centered by a striking intricately detailed ormolu mount with a beautiful female mask flanked by exceptional cornucopias, berried and floral branches set on a most decorative parquetry background, and above a mottled and beaded wrap around ormolu band. The tops display the most decorative and wonderfully executed diamond shaped parquetry designs with fine ormolu bands at the borders.
