An elegant and high quality pair of French 19th century Louis XVI st. Belle Époque period Sèvres porcelain and ormolu ewers. Each ewer is raised by a striking ormolu base with unique and most decorative scrolled foliate movements, fine lattice patterns, and a charming and richly detailed array of seashells. The beautiful Sèvres porcelain bodies are encased by superb foliate and water flora ormolu movements, and display lovely hand painted scenes of birds, cages, musical instruments, and farming tools framed within delicate gilt floral bands. Above are impressive richly chased open winged swans with intricately detailed plumage and necks scrolling to the bodies.
