A beautiful and most decorative pair of Italian 18th century Louis XV period giltwood and Portoro marble freestanding consoles. Each console is raised by handsome hoof feet below elegantly scrolled legs decorated with fine mottled fillets. Each leg is connected by graceful scrolled stretchers with richly carved foliate movements. Above each leg are attractive carved reserves flanked by most impressive and finely detailed pierced scrolled foliate movements which extend along the frieze. Above are the original thick Portoro marble tops with beautiful scalloped shapes and impressive double mottled borders. All original gilt throughout.
