An impressive and exceptionally decorative pair of Italian early 19th century Baroque st. giltwood and Portoro marble consoles/planters. Each wall mounted console is raised by a striking single scrolled support with beautiful feet and adorned in richly carved blooming flowers and exceptional acanthus leaves below seashell carvings. The scallop shaped aprons display stunning intricately detailed masks of handsome bearded men flanked by impressive wings and fluted designs with additional richly carved acanthus leaves. Above are the original removable Portoro marble tops with finely mottled borders. All original gilt throughout.
