A charming and well executed Italian 19th century white Carrara marble statue of a mother breast feeding her child, signed P. Franchi, 1860. The statue is raised on an oval shaped base and is of a seated mother, in classical dress, with one leg raised on a stool. Her child is nestled in her lap cradled within her arms. Wonderful expressions on each of the figures. Pietro Franchi (1817-1878) was a recognized Italian sculptor of the mid 19th century, working from his own studios in Carrara. Known for sculpting his own works as well as sculpting the same works of other artists.
