An elegant Italian early 19th century Louis XVI st. giltwood and white Carrara marble console. The freestanding demi lune console is raised by four circular tapered fluted legs ending with a topie shape feet. The top of the legs are decorated by a carved foliate band below a mottle socle shaped support.

The demi lune shaped apron is exquisitely decorated with swaging floral garlands atop a satin background and parquetry designs. Above is a mottled molding supporting the original marble top with a circular outer band.
