A most handsome French 19th century Neo-Classical st. Sarrancolin marble fireplace mantel, circa 1840. The mantel is raised by fine mottled block supports below impressive richly sculpted paw feet. Each jamb displays an elegant scrolled design with large finely detailed acanthus leaves. A decorative mottled design extends along the opening of the firebox while the apron displays an elegant straight architectural design. Above is the original top showcasing the beautiful Sarrancolin marble grain with an elegant stepped mottled border.
