A very attractive French early 19th century Louis XVI st. solid mahogany gateleg table. The table is raised on reeded legs resting on trestle feet centered by an inverted finial and joined by a reeded stretcher. The central curved gate is hinged to the apron and the stretcher decorated by a brass design element, and will support the tabletop in the upward position. All below the wonderful moulded solid mahogany top The height of the table when it is tilted up is 46.5"
